SUMMARY

- Kazakhstan has a record of steady reporting, leading to strong regularity and timeliness scores. However, no report was published in 2010.
- Recent reports feature audited data from more companies and the addition of the mining sector.
- The latest report provides information on how revenues are allocated in the government budget. However, the templates have not been revised, disaggregation has not improved, and there is also no disaggregation by individual revenue streams.
- Reports lack a materiality definition, an overall summary and a definition of terms.
- The report provides no information on the SOE or even indicates that a very large SOE (KazMunaiGas) operates in the sector.
- Following the reconciliation, no discrepancies were found for 2008.
